The health of Chagres and Kingston was good. There had been very little rain at Chagres. Travelling on the Isthmus was pretty fair.

Theatre and Musicals.
BOWERY THEATRE.—The bill for this evening contained two excellent and highly attractive dramas. We were enabled to see that the energy and enterprise

Hamblin, in producing sterling entertainments. He has grown with unabated success, and we hope will continue in receipt of it for there is no man in the theatrical profession that deserves better treatment at the hands of the public than Thomas S. Hamblin. His entertainments will commence with the romantic comedy called "The Dream of Life," and will terminate with the patriotic drama of "Rob Roy."

BROADWAY THEATRE.—This evening is set apart for the benefit of the widow of Mr. Erasmus Briggs, a Leading artists have volunteered their services, as performers since are varied and attractive, comprising a farce of "I'll be Your Second," the spectacle of "Azazel," and the comedy of "Perfection," in which Julia Bennett, Miss Anderson, Mrs. Brougham, the Gugenheim, Mrs. Abbott, Miss Capel, Messrs. B. Conway, N. B. Clarke, T. B. Johnston, Lynne, G. J. and Fredericks will appear. With such extraordinary attraction, and the noble purpose for which it is planned, we feel confident the public will handsomely NIRLO'S GARDEN.—The entertainments for this eve are, as usual, exceedingly attractive. The final comedy of the "Poor Gentleman," with Burton in his most irresistible character of Dr. Ollapod, will crown the entertainments. The various characters in the piece will be filled by many of the best comedians of the day. The concluding piece will be the amusing farce entitled that "Rascal Jack," in which John Duo, celebrated comedian, will appear as Rascal Jack, in his usual rival.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—A very attractive performance is to take place this evening at this popular theatre drama called "Susan Hopley" will commence the performances, with Mrs. Melinda Jones sustaining the character of Susan Hopley. The popular drama styled "deceit" will follow.—Mr. J. K. Scott personating the character of Gildroy; and the concluding piece will be the farce of the "Wood Dealer," in which Mr. Tucker appear as Deuteronomy Puttful. Two pleasing acts will be executed between the pieces, by Miss May.

BROUGHAM'S LYCEUM.—Miss Julia Bennett, who has been delighting the numerous visitors of this picture theatre, is announced to make her last appearance to-night. For the period she has been playing at this theatre, she has given general satisfaction by her brilliant comic delineations, and we are sorry to hear of her leaving, as she has been a great favorite, and was a valuable addition to Brougham's company. To-night the selected acts are "Ladies' Battle," and "Jenny Lind," and a crowded house may be expected.

BARNES'S MUSEUM.—This has been a brilliant week for the museum, both as regards the performances and proceeds. This afternoon and evening, Javelli, Cline and Larue will appear for the last time in the present series of performances. Javelli is to make a grand ascension from the stage to the galleries this evening, which of itself is worth double the price charged in admission to the whole museum and performances. The faces performed here are well worth seeing, and entire entertainments are such as will unquestionably CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS will give two concerts to-day (Monday) and evening. An excellent programme is offered. Go early.

FELLOWS' MINSTRELS AND THE NEW ORLEANS NADES—A fine entertainment is announced for to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon and evening.

CASTLE GARDEN.—Maretzek's orchestra will give eighth Sunday concert to-morrow evening at this place.

NATIONAL CONCERT HALL.—A grand sacred will take place at this new and splendid hall, situated in Canal street, two doors from Broadway, tomorrow evening.

TRIPLER HALL.—Mendelssohn's oratorio of "F" will be given by the New York Harmonic Society, above hall, on Wednesday evening next.

HANDEL FESTIVAL.—This grand affair will come off at the same hall with the oratorio.

JENNY LIND IN BOSTON.—Jenny Lind's concert last evening was all that we anticipated. The house was full, completely full; and yet there were seats for all. Seats were placed in two of the aisles, but no seats were allowed, and the passageways were unobstructed. The slips were not excessively crowded, as a rule, and the music was of a pleasing character, and the house was filled in every part—above, below, around—yet the audience was seated without the least trouble or confusion, and good humor seemed to reign all around, ladies being heard on all sides congratulating themselves on the excellence of their seats. The whole arrangement of matters last night must have satisfied the public that Miss Lind has those about her who are abundantly competent to manage her concerns in a way that will not only be profitable to her, but, could never be said of Barnum's arrangements.

able to all who wish to attend them.—Boston Times Herald, June 19.

directed on a charge of assault and battery, with intent to commit a rape, and for aiding in the perpetration of that offense. There appeared to be no doubt about the assault, although it might have been difficult to prove the intent to rape. The District Attorney, therefore, accepted the plea offered by the prisoners, and the Court sentenced them each to the penitentiary for 18 months. The little girl who was the complainant in the case, and who has been kept in prison as a witness for a number of weeks, was asked by the Recorder if she was a slave. She burst into tears, and replied that she was.

neither home nor relatives in this country. She had been here nearly a year, during most of which she had lived at service in the country. She begged to go back to Mrs. Foster, the matron of the City, as that lady had promised to procure a situation for her, besides, she was afraid of personal injury at the hands of those who had already attempted to injure her. She appeared to be an intelligent, unaided girl. The Court ordered that she be given to her, and that, according to her request.
